

Community RISE Project

GCADV's Community Relationships Informing Survivor Engagement (RISE) Project, supports Georgia's community based non-profit organizations providing culturally relevant services to survivors of domestic violence (DV) who identify from communities of color and other marginalized communities. This project is specifically designed to cater to the needs of small, non-traditional, grassroots organizations who are un-resourced or under-resourced as they rise in their communities to meet the short-and long-term needs of DV survivors. Selected organizations will receive up to twenty four months of intense on-site training and technical assistance, with the potential for long term follow-up and support.

GCADV's goal is to assist community based organizations in building overall organizational capacity and sustainability towards their success in proficiently meeting the needs of DV survivors and their communities. This goal is accomplished by providing organizations with:

- Monthly in-person technical assistance related to organizational capacity building and sustainability
- Assessment of organizational practices, policies, and procedures.
- In-person work sessions for strategic planning and implementation
- Mission cultivation and streamlining support
- Cultivation and assessment of culturally relevant and linguistically appropriate services, resources, programming, and outreach
- Board training
- Access to state and national training opportunities and information

In addition to the application, interested organizations should include copies of the following information:

- Organizational mission and/or value statement
- Description of programming, services, or resources organization provides

Interested applicants should send completed applications no later than October 30, 2017 by:
